Launcher apps download

Android Launcher apps have long been an integral part of the Android experience. If you don't like the way your home screens look or behave, you can simply download an app to change it completely. There is no doubt that Android Launcher apps have a variety of features much more than any other type of app and you can really do some amazing things with these apps. This includes keeping them closer to stock like Google Android or something out of the way out there like niagara launcher. Here are the best Android launchers now! We were a Google Pixel Launcher list. However, they are only available for Pixel devices. We recommend Nova, Lawnchair, or rootless if you want to experience a more pixel-like experience. Read next: Android Launchers Comparison: What's the Best Choice For You? Action LauncherPrice: Free/\$4.99+ Launcher Action long-time Android Launcher is our favorite readers. It comes with a stock feel robot. However, there are some additional features above the top that add some exclusivity. Quicktheme lets you customize your ui colors based on your background. Shuters lets you check the app widget without actually putting one on the home screen. It even has the elements of customization and power to make your phone feel more like Android Oreo. There is also code package support, frequent updates, and lots more. There's so much to like about this so the app drawer is configurable. AIO LauncherPrice: Free /\$1.99AIO Launcher does it differently than many Android Launcher apps. It doesn't go away with the standard home screen in favor of a packed information list of stuff. It shows things like the latest SMS and missed calls, your media player, your system information (RAM, battery, storage, etc.), and even things like news, bitcoin price, Twitter and more. The paid version also includes integration for Telegram and your regular widgets from other applications. Not everything that might look like Android Stock and AIO Launcher certainly shows that it can be done effectively. It is free for most features. The full version is very reasonable \$1.99.Apex LauncherPrice: Free / \$3.99Apex Launcher has been around for a very long time and remains one of the most famous Android launcher apps ever. Like the action operator, it aims to give the Android look and feel with some additional features thrown in for good measure. Those include the ability to change things like animated transition, scrolling habits, and there's even a scrolling dock where you can put a lot of icons. Apex Launcher also includes a theme drive. The app underwent some major changes in 2018. It looks more modern now. APUS LauncherPrice: FreeAPUS Launcher is a fun app if you like tons of customization. It features a collection of over 50,000 wallpapers along with tons of additional themes. Some other features include news feed, the ability to hide apps from the app drawer, built-in app lock function, and a few other good articles. It's not quite as light or effective as pixel style launchers like Nova Hyperion, Lancashire, etc. However, it's a lot of colorful and inflamed. Some people prefer it this way. Free launcher with advertising support. Our only real complaint is that you can't buy the app to remove ads. Hyperion LauncherPrice: Free /\$2.99Hyperion Launcher is a new baby on android launcher block. It slots in nicely between heavier launchers such as Action and Nova and stock android experience from Lawnchair. The user interface is definitely stock looking without tons of puffiness or taste. There are a lot of customization features, though. They include third-party code support, shape change code, self-elements, and some other neat things. It supports Google Feed, but requires a separate load just like most other launchers. It's new, but it's already slots in positive among the best launchers on Android.Lawnchair Launcher 2Price: FreeLawnchair Launcher is an excellent Android launcher for minimalist fans. It's an open source project that mimics a lot of pixel Launcher look and feel. It features many features similar to Pixel Launcher with a few other features. These features include support package icons, Google Now integration (with optional and free plugin), adaptive icons, and various other customizations. The original was described very for its stock-like appearance in addition to its customization features. Developers now list the app as Lawnchair 2 and it's still in beta, but includes some more modern Android features. The app is also completely free. Lightning LauncherPrice: \$4.99 + \$1.99Lightning Launcher used to be fairly decent, minimal Android launcher. It has since grown to become one of the most customizable Android launchers ever. It's still very very lightweight. It gives you the ability to change almost anything on the home screen. You can even multiple sets of home screens for multiple occasions. Perhaps the most unique feature is programming support. You can use JavaScript to make lightning do all sorts of things. There are also additional add-ons, language packages, and more available for download. The list of features isn't all that for a relatively long time, but it seems to tick all the correct boxes. The app also has a learning curve, but it's worth learning. Microsoft LauncherMail: FreeMicrosoft Launcher is not a new launcher. The app is used to be arrow launcher. Microsoft reclassified the app in mid-2017. The app is integrated with many Microsoft services, including calendar, email, to-do list application, and direct integration with Microsoft computers. It also has customization features and gesture controls. This one returned to beta after the brand change. Thus, there are some potential bugs right now. However, it's something different and particularly useful for those who want better integration with Windows PCs. Microsoft is rebuilding this app from a thousand to a thousand, and you can try out here if you wish. This new version is likely to replace this version in this list in the future when it is officially LauncherPrice: FreeNiagara Launcher is the latest launcher app on the menu and it's kind of a selection of our diamonds in rough. It features a very minimal user interface with a clean look, excellent working environment, and an elegant look. The app also tries to reduce your need to keep notifications with integrated message notifications as well as music controls. There are some light wandering options available with basic things like support ing codes package. It's still early beta access now so there may be an accidental bug, but if you press the button below and it's not in early access anymore, assume that these bugs are fixed. Nova Launcher: Free / \$4.99It doesn't get much better than Nova Launcher. Like Apex Launcher, Nova has been around since the old days. It is still not only relevant, but one of the best Android launcher app options available. It has a laundry list of customization features that include gesture support, the ability to customize the look and feel of the app, code pack support, themes, and much more. The app is also updated at a high pace, which means that errors are usually broken quickly and new features are constantly added. It also comes with the ability to back up and restore your home screen layouts when you eventually switch to a new phone. It's what we recommend you try first!OlauncherPrice: Olauncher Free is one of the newest Android launch apps on this list. It boasts a minimal user interface, less of average customizations, and a distraction-free use. The app deliberately omits common graphical elements such as icons in order to reduce the experience. You can set a background and do some customizations, but that's kind of an idea. You can install it, use it, and it doesn't get in the way. The app is the latest and the developer still adds new features. However, this is one of the best minimal style launchers in recent memory. Poco LauncherPrice: FreePoco Launcher is a stock launcher for the popular (and cheap) Pocophone. It's actually available for most Android devices and that's kind of surprising considering Google won't even release them. This is a fairly basic launcher. It has your basic stock layout robot nest with icons on the home screen and a swipe app drawer to access. You can customize things like the home screen network and the background of the app drawer. It also has a privacy option that hides icons from the app drawer if you want. Otherwise, it works light and smooth. It's an easy recommendation for people with lower-end devices and those with higher end-end devices who want something very simple. Rootless LauncherPrice: FreeRootless Launcher is a decent Android style launcher from 2018. It's actually a fairly basic experience. You can get the Android stock look and feel with some additional customization elements to complete the look. Some features include code pack support, adaptive code pack support, code shape locator, features based on your background, and you can change the location of the search bar. Google can also get a feed working on this launcher, but like most of it requires additional plug-in download and installation. The site with instructions for it in the Google Play description. This is right there with Hyperion and Lawnchair as a great choice for Android stock lovers. Smart Launcher 5Price: Freeup to \$6.99Smart Launcher 5 is a vast difference from Smart Launcher 3. Thank God, it's in a positive direction. It features a modern user interface, surrounding interface features, modern features such as adaptive icons and more. It even has weather, clock widget and gesture controls. It's not quite as powerful as Nova Launcher or similar launchers. However, it has enough features to be quite enjoyable. It's like competing directly with Action Launcher and similar apps when it comes to customization and ease of use. Total LauncherMail: FreeTotal Launcher is not the most popular launcher on the list. However, it is still very good. It boasts a very high level of customization along with different themes and some other features. However, it also comes with a steeper learning curve than most. Those who stand up and learn what they do are treated with something really special. On the other hand, those who just want something simple to work right may want to try something like CPL, rootless launcher, Hyperion launcher, or one of the other options. If we miss any of the best Android Launcher apps, tell us about them in the comments! The pixel launcher should ever make it to Google Play, you can bet that it will end up on this list after rushing! You can find our latest app lists by clicking here! In here!
